THE CONTEMPT OF COURT CASE.

nearly 40 years of age, had lost his form. Since the above event, British valour seems to have forsaken the breasts of the Thames and Tyne professional rowing men. The unfortunate collapse of the match had been arranged between Trickett and Lumsden, immediately after the victory of the former over Sadler, combined with the not altogether creditable succo connected with the affair, rather disgraced the British public. After Trickett's departure, it became a question not easily answered, as to who was entitled to be considered the best sculler in England. Higgins and Boyd both laying claim to the title. After Sadler's race with Trickett, he met other competitors, who defeated him, according to English notions much more easily than Trickett had done, and, taking collateral form as a guide, the English sporting Press held Boyd and Higgins as being the superior of Sadler's conqueror. Therefore, it was not to be wondered at that the partisans of the former should have been eager to lose no time in sending him to Sydney to test conclusions with Trickett, and endeavour once more to get back the title to England. But wiser counsels prevailed, as Boyd's superiority over the scullers of his own country had not been indisputably asserted. Hence the Englishman's projected trip to Sydney was abandoned. Subsequent events showed that there was no great difference between Higgins, Boyd, and Elliott, as they contested with varying results.

The regatta held at Philadelphia in the autumn of 1876, on the occasion of the Centennial Exhibition, in which numerous competitors from Great Britain and Ireland, both amateur and professional, took part, and in which the Americans proved quite equal to their guests, no doubt led to the visits of Transatlantic oarsmen and scullers to England—notably those of the Columbia College and Showacacemete four, in the succeeding summer, and of Wallace Ross and Hanlan to compete with the professionals of the mother-country. The latter, with whom we are more immediately concerned, arrived in England holding the honours of champion of America, in the English spring of 1879, having conquered all the best Transatlantic scullers—amongst them Courtney, Wallace Ross, Plaisted, Morris, Coulter, Wickes, Elliott, Luther, Edward Ross, and Hooper. Hanlan was matched against John Hawdon, whom he defeated with ridiculous ease on the Tyne; distance, about 3 miles 563 yards; time, 22 minutes. Hawdon's career up to this time had been a brilliant one, he having vanquished Hynes, of Stockton; then Robert Bagnell, the ex-champion; J. H. Sadler; J. Cannon, a Thame sculler; and in turn he defeated William Lumsden. On June 10th, 1879, Hanlan defeated William Elliott, of Pegswig, for £200 a side and the Sportsman's Challenge Cup and the Championship of England on the Tyne-course: time, 21 minutes. Hanlan returned to Canada, and continued his career of success. On August 18, 1879, he rowed a dead heat with J. H. Riley for first prize, £500 dollars, in an open regatta, less than four miles, with turn, at Barrie, Ont. Hanlan defeated William Elliott, of Pegswig, for £200 a side and the Sportsman's Challenge Cup and the Championship of England on the Tyne-course: time, 21 minutes. Hanlan's record for the pure, won on May 19, 1879, at Chautauqua Lake, N.Y., but the latter's boats were found on the morning of the 16th to have been disabled by sawing, and he did not start. Hanlan rowing over the course, at command of the referee, and being declared winner of the prize, which, however, the donors refused to pay him until he had won it by defeating a competitor. On May 19, 1880, he beat C. E. Courtney, 6000-dollar purse, 5 miles with turn, at Washington; time, 36 minutes 46-2 seconds. On May 26, 1880, he beat J. H. Riley, 2000-dollar purse, 5 miles with turn, at Washington; time, 36 minutes 24-10 seconds. The races lost are as follows:—June 18, 1877, beaten by F. A. Plaisted, rope, 3 miles, at Plympton, Massachusetts; time, 21 minutes 29 seconds. July 4, 1877, disqualified for fouling, purse of 220 dollars, 2 miles; entries—Plaisted, Ten Eyck, Bradley, M'Ken, M'Kee, Hosmer, Driscoll, Kelly, and Ahern, at Boston, Mass.; time, 14 minutes 24 seconds. June 17, 1880, beaten by Wallace Ross, in southern race at regatta at Providence, Rhode Island; first prize 3000 dollars, 5 miles. Hanlan stopped racing through illness. He was rowed in 24 races, 19 of which have been won and three lost. The other two were rowed on August 16 against Riley, a dead heat being the result; and on October 16, in the match against Courtney, as we have said, he was beaten. The American prizes were won in half, Hanlan rowed over the course alone.

Trickett returned to the colony in November; 1879; and at the following Anniversary Regatta he again appeared in competition with Laycock, Green, and Solomon, in two races, and won them both easily. Then followed the great event for the championship of the world between Trickett and Rush, on the Parramatta River. The race took place on the 30th June, and after Rush had led for a mile, the champion rowed down, and afterwards won with great ease. Luck attended Trickett in nearly all his important engagements up to January, 1878, when, at the Anniversary Regatta, Laycock defeated him easily; but Trickett was manifestly short of condition. His defeat caused a great surprise, notwithstanding; and may be regarded as a striking illustration of what condition and training are worth. The only other race Trickett has engaged in was with Laycock on the championship course, Parramatta River. August 29th, 1878, in the presence of an immense number of people afloat and ashore. Such an assemblage of spectators at the various points where the progress of the race could be more clearly seen than at others, such a number of crowded steamers, and such excitement and enthusiasm as were apparent, while the contest was proceeding, exceeded perhaps anything of the kind ever before met with in aquatic events here, and certainly were more significant than even the greater interest evinced on the occasion when Trickett competed with Rash for the championship on his return from England. Trickett scored an easy victory—no mean achievement in view of Laycock's recent successive wins on the Thames.

A match having been arranged with Hanlan and Trickett for £200 a side over the Thames course, Trickett left for England in the Orient (.) on June 8th. He has for some time past been under the tuition of Harry Kelley on the Thames, and during his training he came steadily into favour. Advice both by mail and "wire" went to show that there was every prospect of a victory over the Canadian. We understand that in a private trial between Laycock and Trickett, on the Thames, the latter was able to part company with his old opponent to coast as comfortably as he did on the Parramatta River, means a easy manner in which Laycock defeated Blackman, on the Margin, and Riley was regarded as a significant indicator. The follett Hanlan, the Canadian, in order to defeat our hero, would have a tough task than he had ever result of it before. Trickett, since he made his debut last night, should, anniversary Regatta, 14 years ago, has rowed right along, to see he has won 19 and lost eight, white light should be.

very important matter, and he believed in the Kenny Hill scheme of Mr. Gipps, and should support it. He thought that any sewerage scheme to be adopted must be in the nature of a franchise, and be carried out as soon as possible. He thought that the most important thing was to have a franchise; but, as far as he could see, there could not be remitted; but, on the other hand, the squatters did not pay enough for their land. Give them longer leases, and charge them, instead of a farthing an acre, two-pence or three-pence. Then he was impressed with the necessity for a Licensing Bill. The last few months had been a responsible publican to get a license, because licences were packed. Did those magistrates know the wants of the Glebe as well as the people in the district did? He was opposed to the immigration of Chinese. (Applause.) Why should we allow that Mongolian race to come here and mix with us? We have got a good many Chinese here, a good large poll-tax upon them—(applause)—for they were swarming in numbers and ruining trade, as they had ruined the cabinmakers' trade. He would put a poll-tax of $20 a-head on every one of them. He was opposed to the Chinese, because they were bringing out a class of poor men, who, because they were brought out, going into the country. (Applause.) He was a free trader, but he believed in fostering our colonial industries. He thought it a shame that with all their raw materials they should send it away to be manufactured in foreign countries. He should be inclined to favour the bond system, to encourage industry, to give more time so to start them; because the crying question of the day was, what should we do with our bond? They must have employment found for them, and we should encourage the establishment of manufacturers by bonuses. He was in favour of the proposed free-trade New South Wales, or proposed Protectionist Free-Trade. (Applause.) Daniel Coopers, for instance, should say something to the State for the large sum of money received from the colony to spend at home. (Loud applause.) Then he was in favour of a wheel-tax, for while a hawker had to pay for his cartage and pair, and he thought they should have a equality of taxation. He was in favour of free-thought lectures; and of the systematic inspection of boilers on shore as well as on sea. He was also in favour of eight hours' labour—(applause)—and the Government should adopt it. He was in favour of a railway, and that from Sydney to Albury would open up a vast country, and they might both be constructed together. He was in favour of a tramway to Glebe Point. He was opposed to the Stamp Duties Act, which came very hard on those who had to do with building societies. (Applause.) He had now touched upon the question of the day. He had broached them, and he was in their hands; he had the brains and time to serve them, and would leave it to them to judge as to whether he had the ability. He was placed at a great disadvantage in coming out against one who was Speaker of the Assembly, and a member of the House of Representatives. And he hoped they would vote for him on Thursday next. Let them put his qualifications against Sir George Wigram Allen's, and vote for the best man. (Applause.)

A show of hands was then called for, and the Returning-Officer declared the result to be unmistakably in favour of Sir George Wigram Allen. (Continued cheering.) A poll was taken by Mr. Graham, and will be taken on Thursday (to-morrow). On the motion of Sir George Wigram Allen, seconded by Mr. GRAHAM, a vote of thanks to the chairman was carried by acclamation, and cheers for the Queen having been given the proceedings terminated.

PADDINGTON.

Yesterday, a meeting of the electors of Paddington was held at the freehold property of the junction of Pitt and Piper Roads, with South Head Road, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the representation of the electorate. About six hundred persons were present. At noon, Mr. John M'Pherson, the returning officer, began the proceedings by reading the resolution convening the meeting, and the election was then opened.

Mr. W. TAYLOR nominated Mr. W. J. Trickett as a fit person to represent the constituency in Parliament. He did not decline the responsibility in any way; and right before that of any other candidate had been nominated.

Mr. JOHN S. NORMAN nominated Mr. William Holst. He had known the gentleman for a considerable time, and he believed that as far as his lights went he had done his level best to serve the interests of Parliament. He believed that Mr. Holst was one of the most earnest and conscientious men they had sent to serve them.

Mr. P. R. HOLDSWORTH seconded the nomination. He believed that Mr. Holst was well qualified by his history and experience to represent them in Parliament. If he had not spoken in every debate in the House, he had done his best to speak in every division. They did not require much to speak on every question, but men of practical intelligence.

Mr. G. FLETCHER nominated Mr. W. J. Allen as one who had long been among them, and would probably represent them.

Mr. R. C. DAWSON seconded the nomination. Mr. Allen was a good speaker, was a man that was respected, and had taken part in every movement that had for its object the moral improvement of young men. He was a man of good understanding, and well qualified to represent the constituency.

Mr. W. H. MOORE nominated Mr. J. A. Carroll.

Mr. WILLIAM SHEARLE seconded the nomination. He supported Mr. Carroll especially because of his advocacy of protectionist principles.

Mr. W. J. TRICKETT, who was received with cheers, said that since he had been on the platform he had not heard of the nomination of any friend, and he was not likely to give him one of their votes. (Cheers.) He was not a stranger among them. His father had been one of the pioneers of the Woolstonecraft district, and he had worked subsequently in the interests of the various suburbs. (Cheers.) There was one member who appeared to be carried on by his four constituents as a hero. With one miserable exception, pointed at himself, there had been no personalities; and he did not give his opponents credit for having inserted the sensible advertisement to which he referred. (Cheers.) Six months ago he announced that he would stand on the platform, and had not yet seen one of the seats; as, in response to a request submitted to him two months ago, he at once fell in with the views of the requisitionists, and resolved to contest the election. He hoped that the numerous promises made to him on that occasion would be fulfilled, and that the requisitionists would roll up a majority for him. His vote was all to be found in the name of the Tranway Company. Such a company was not to be expected, but he would not tolerate any monopoly. He had taken the constitutional course of not coming forward before the old Parliament died out. The shortness of the time given to the electors to make up their minds to go to the polls, he never attempted to stand on the floor of the House to repeat the arguments advanced by others; and he would never do so, unless he would be able to improve the case from another standpoint. He was the first to take up the cause of the Tranway Company, and that destroying the police down hill hills—a most unmanly and unjust act. (Uproar.) Not only that, they ought to put him out of the Civil service, for it was a racially shame for the exercise of patronage to push himself forward. His principles, in short, were civil and religious liberty for all. (Cheers.)

Mr. TRICKETT was received with cheers. He said he had come before them to-day to tell them to renew the resistance they had placed to his seat some eight or nine months ago, and to ask for their support in his contest for re-election. He had not displayed more intelligence than that he had not within the last month or two. (Laughter.) While he thought they ought to be treated justly, it was a great injustice to allow bards of them to count for no other purpose than to fill their pockets with the wealth of this country that should be expended among them, to carry it away to another country. They were neither socially, mentally, nor physically qualified to become members of a European society, and that was the reason why they could not be admitted to the universities in this country. (Uproar.) Until they did that, what were they going to do with their children? One gentleman said that they did not want the people in the town. He did. He had a house to let—(laughter)—and he did not want the people to go to his house. The question was, was the National system the best? He thought the present system of public ships being sent in an unworthy condition, imperilling the lives of their crews in the way they had seen. And if such a measure was passed he hoped its terms would be so clear that they could not be evaded. He should not be afraid to tell all the elections on one day, as it would be a waste of time to have a separate election for each constituency. (Applause.)

He had voted for the Tranway Company, and had not given his vote to the Civil service, for it was a great disservice to the country. He had voted for the Tranway Company, and had not given his vote to the Civil service, for it was a great disservice to the country. (Applause.)

Davies, George Murray, J. L. Archibald, Archibald Forrester, Robert James Parish, John G. North, George Keenick, John Woods, William C. Carpenter, W. B. Banks.

SOUTH SYDNEY ELECTION.

WILLIAM THOMAS POOLE, J.P.

WHO IS MR. POOLE?

is never often asked.

We are greatly interested that

MR. POOLE has been in this colony 23 years.

ALL THAT TIME

BEEN ENGAGED

LARGE BUILDING CONTRACTS.

He is one of the

FIRST-STEAM HAMMER

ever used in the COLONY.

HE WAS ONE OF THE FIRST

to INTRODUCE SUGAR-MAKING MACHINERY

in the COLONY.

HE HAS BEEN ENGAGED

CONTRACTOR on the VARIOUS PUBLIC WORKS of the COLONY.

RAILWAYS, SEWERS, AND RESERVOIRS.

Mr. having successfully carried out these large engagements to the SATISFACTION OF THE GOVERNMENT, and also to his own advantage, enabled him to devote his time, means, and ability to

SERVE THE PUBLIC

in PARLIAMENT,

and he now offers to do so, not like some of those who have made fortunes by doing so in other countries;

he is now pending the fruits of his industry in erecting a large brick-work in Redfern, near the Town Hall.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF CANTERBURY.

Gentlemen.—At the request of many influential residents and electors, I have the honour to announce myself as a candidate for one of the seats for Canterbury in the new Parliament, and I at once desire before you my views on the principal questions of the day.

ELECTION.—I should support the present Act most thoroughly, as it is, in my opinion, the one of the grandest in the world.

FREE TRADE.—I am a sincere advocate for a free and unfettered trade, and for the removal of all restrictions on the market, but would advocate giving them an increased scope. I am also in favour of the extension of the protective tariff, and would support 10 and 14 d.p.m., provided that the squatter should be protected from blackmail by being enabled to remove his stock after notice of selection had been given.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.—I am totally opposed to,

LICENSING ACT.—I am in favour of a new Act with the local municipalities.

MUNICIPALITIES.—I am in favour of extending municipalities and increased assessment.

RAILWAYS.—I would strongly urge the extension from Redfern to Chatswood, and the extension of the Illawarra line, together with pushing on all main trunk lines of the colony.

WATER SUPPLY.—I am strongly impressed with Mr. Gipps' high-level project, and would support every measure to have it speedily tested and adopted before they made a final decision.

I am also in favour of an absence tax, wheel tax, and the abolition of the restrictive Upper House, federation, and the colonies, and the eight-hours movement. It is unnecessary for me to say that a man's native should have my strict attention, nor, having a seat in the Legislature, will I be able to give any attention to our wants being identical; that I shall always support anything that would tend to promote the welfare of us all. These being my views, I trust, if I am elected, to have the support of the majority of the electors.

EDUCATION.—I should support the present Act most thoroughly, as it is, in my opinion, one of the grandest in the world.

FREE TRADE.—I am a sincere advocate for a free and

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST SYDNEY.

Gentlemen.—The electoral campaign is now fairly opened by the dissolution of Parliament. It is necessary that I should give you a few words of explanation in regard to the position upon which I venture to claim your support. The short time which has unaccountably but perhaps not the less wisely—been given us for the consideration of the question of the extension of the franchise, has been used by me to the best of my ability to impress upon you the importance of the cause, and the unbroken support of a vast majority of the people, who are engaged in the secret machinations, or left to the doubtful fortunes of individual politicians, for the maintenance of their power.

It returned as your representative I shall strenuously oppose restrictions on the operations of industry and commerce, as far as I can. I am strongly of opinion that the expenditure so largely increased by the extension of the franchise, will be more than compensated by the public revenue, and the additional cost of maintaining the franchise.

I cannot be expected to be indifferent to the result of this election, but I trust that the Public Instruction Act of last session does not come into full operation until the end of 1882, and the consequences will likely appear to be important. We must, however, be prepared for the worst. We must, if possible, make it a duty to serve you.

But the Act is one which is best made openly, and openly.

As far as I can see, the only way to secure the adoption of the Act is to have it introduced by the Government.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.

It is the duty of every man to do his best to help to bring about the extension of the franchise.
